Responsive to the Customer's Needs

A User's Experience

I've found Mike and his team at The Development Company very responsive to our needs.

They delivered bespoke coaching and training for us, using a really good mix of practical examples, theory and humour.

The programme was tailored for our audience, some of whom have little management training.

The consultant managed, in a very short time, to build trust with those he was training, so that they quickly became more open about their own experience, and in turn were able to share and learn more in the time available.

He was able to deliver a great learning experience that has stuck in people's minds.

As the manager of a small team, within a short space of time, Mike was able to give feedback to me on my style and advise me on how to manage my team better and to get more out of them for the business.
